DRYS ARE STUNNED BY STEADY DRIVE OF REPEAL FORCES

SPEAKEASIES PROTESTED BY THE TAVERNS

Hartford, Conn., Aug. 29.—(UP)—Charges that speakeasies are cutting into the legitimate trade of beer taverns, and that "pocket bootleggers" are hanging around taverns in an effort to interest patrons in something stronger than 3.2 beer were made at a meeting of tavern owners here yesterday afternoon.
The pocket peddlers, it was said, even come into the taverns and offer alcohol to the drinkers so they can "spike" their beer. Tavern owners pointed out that their bonds and investments were jeopardized by such tactics, as the state law provides for revocation of permits and forfeiture of bonds when hard liquor is found in a tavern.
Their strategy as now being planned is this:
1. In states that were dry before prohibition they will fight to hold state-wide dry laws on the books and retain as much as possible of these areas. Before federal prohibition they held three-fourths of the area of the country.

1. In states that were dry before prohibition they will fight to hold state-wide dry laws on the books and retain as much as possible of these areas. Before federal prohibition they held three-fourths of the area of the country.

TRAIN HURLED FROM BRIDGE INTO RIVER

Plunged Through Weakened Structure—Seven Coaches Were Piled on Top of the Engine

Tucumcari, N. M., Aug. 29.—(UP)—The fast Golden State limited passenger train plunged through Hargis Switch bridge early today killing four passengers and at least one member of the crew. Seven coaches were piled on top of the engine in flood-swollen Pecos Creek. A fireman was missing and believed lost, which would bring the death toll to six.
Upwards of two score persons were injured, some merely suffering from shock. It was feared other bodies might be found in the raging waters of the creek, which heavy rain had raised from a trickle to a torrent. About 45 survivors were brought to Tucumcari, five miles east of the scene of the wreck, and placed in hospitals or private homes.
The train, en route eastward from Los Angeles, under joint operation of the Southern Pacific and Rock Island roads, struck a section of washed out track as it approached the bridge. The rain had carried away the east approach to the bridge, leaving up the track the length of three rails.
The engine hurtled across the bridge.

Vice-President of Irish Free State Arrived in New York To-day for Visit Here

New York, Aug. 29.—(U.P.)—Failure for the "Blue Shirt" movement in Ireland, headed by General Eamon O'Duffy, was predicted today by Sean O'Kelly, vice-president of the Irish Free State who arrived on the Laconia. He has no political objective which might settle such issues at the polls. We have had the lack of internal strife. Ireland is settling its affairs, does not mean to follow a Latin-American precedent."
